Overview of Chiropractic Technique for the Practicing Doctor of Chiropractic: The President’s Series

Logan University’s College of Chiropractic Postgraduate Department is excited to present this series of 12-hour seminars on chiropractic technique. The seminars are 12-hour overviews of popular, proven chiropractic techniques. Whenever we present a postgraduate seminar we always ask the attendees what type of seminars they would like to see on our campus. We always get suggestions for pediatrics, nutrition, sports, and rehab. But the most frequent suggestions are on chiropractic adjustive technique. It’s what we do as chiropractors every single day in our practice. Whether it’s Diversified, Basic, Gonstead, Thompson, Applied Kinesiology, SOT®, etc. all of these techniques encompass the philosophy, science, and art of chiropractic. So, when we get requests to highlight the various chiropractic healing techniques we are thrilled to move forward with them. Logan teaches more techniques than any other chiropractic college and we have the most expert instructors in technique. Therefore, we have decided to begin with 12 chiropractic techniques, all part of the Overview of Chiropractic Technique for the Practicing Doctor of Chiropractic Series. We begin with An Overview of Sacro Occipital Technic™ (SOT®) Methods of Chiropractic and Chiropractic Craniopathy and then follow up with the additional technique seminars below for a total of 12 hands-on seminars designed to teach you new techniques and/or refresh your knowledge and skills in the techniques you are already using. When we mentioned this series to Dr. Clay McDonald, the President of Logan University, he said, “It’s a natural fit for the school that teaches more techniques than any other. Let’s do something more, and provide an opportunity for an informal get together at Meadowbrook Country Club after each Saturday night session. A reception with hor d’oeuvres and beverages to get to know each other better.”

We loved the idea and decided to name this group of outstanding seminars The President’s Series. We really can’t wait to get started. It will be educational, fun, and immediately useable in your practice Monday morning.
